

6516208915.txt

I believe that the airwaves are a "free domain" and programming must not be stifled by any group unless it is vulgar and not acceptable to everyone's ears. The last I looked our country was founded on the free enterprise system. I don't see how eliminating traffic and weather from satellite radio helps stimulate free enterprise. Does this mean that the Weather Channel will be removed from the satellite TV? If the broadcasters can provide a better service during the major traffic hours, they should do it. But don't do it by killing the opponent. This is what free enterprise is all about!